GO FOR IT.

NATIONAL TREASURE: BOOK OF SECRETS

release: 12.21.07

When treasure hunter Ben Gates finds out about a missing page from John Wilkes Booth's diary that connects his great-great grandfather to the murder of Abraham Lincoln, he sets out to clear his family's name. The whole crew from the first movie returns to help Ben unravel the mystery behind the murder and follow the clues leading to some of the world's best-kept secrets.

THE WATER HORSE

release: 12.25.07

GO FOR IT.

A young boy finds a mysterious egg, and as any little kid would do, he decides to take it home and see what hatches. To the boy's astonishment, the egg contains an enchanted creature he dubs a water horse. The creature quickly outgrows the bathtub and the boy has to figure out a way to keep a giant sea monster a secret. Maybe he should have left the egg alone.

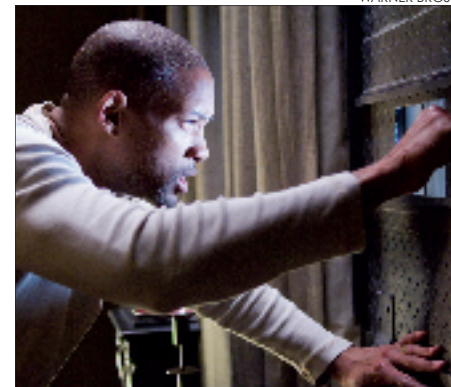

JOHN RAMBO

release: 1.25.08

STAY AWAY.

Do you really need a plot description? Rambo gets angry, shoots a lot of people, the end. A new "Die Hard" last year, a fourth "Indiana Jones" in the summer and now "Rambo"—there must have been some type of senior citizen discount on action movies. At 61, Sylvester Stallone looks downright unnatural gunning down terrorists in the jungle. This flick has "cash-in" written all over it. Go see "The Water Horse" again instead.

WARNER BROS.

I AM LEGEND

release: 12.14.07

AT YOUR OWN RISK.

I Am Legend is more than a mere zombie movie, it's a survival epic. Will Smith plays scientist Robert Neville, the last man standing after an infectious manmade virus wipes out New York. Think of this movie like Cast Away, but instead of a tropical island there's New York City and instead of an imaginary volleyball friend, there's a dog and vicious infected zombie things.
